

Website Vision

The website should position the business as a private collector and sourcing partner, not a traditional dealership or vehicle flipper. The emphasis is on finding unique vehicles, preserving automotive history, and connecting with owners of collector cars that may not currently be on the market. The goal is to create an information-driven website that generates leads, rather than an inventory-focused dealership website.

Core Brand Message

More Collector Than Dealer

We are passionate automotive enthusiasts actively seeking collector vehicles, barn finds, garage finds, unfinished restoration projects, and rare vintage parts. Whether a vehicle has been sitting for decades, is mid-restoration, or simply needs a new home, we want to hear about it.

Many of the vehicles we acquire are sold to fellow collectors, specialty dealers, private buyers, or international enthusiasts. Because we purchase carefully and often below current market values, we can move inventory quickly while preserving unique automotive history.

Primary Website Goals

1. Generate Vehicle Acquisition Leads

The primary objective is to encourage visitors to contact us about:

- Barn finds
- Garage finds
- Collector vehicles
- Vintage American cars
- Project cars
- Mid-restoration vehicles
- Estate vehicles
- Vintage automotive parts
- Vehicles that have been off the road for years

Every page should support the message: "If you have a collector vehicle or parts to sell, we want to talk to you."

2. Build Credibility as a Collector

3. Educate Collectors and Families

Provide guidance for:

- Estate vehicle collections
- Inherited collector cars
- Vintage parts identification
- What not to throw away during cleanouts
- Understanding the value of old automotive parts and memorabilia

Many people don't realize that old parts, documentation, signs, manuals, and restoration components can have significant value.

Suggested Navigation

Home, Cars We Are Looking For, Cars We Buy, Cars We've Purchased, Vehicles For Sale, Estate & Collection Assistance, About Us, Contact Us

Design Direction

The site should feel like a private collector's portfolio and acquisition hub, rather than a traditional dealership. The overall tone should be authentic, knowledgeable, and approachable, appealing to collectors, families handling estates, and owners of forgotten vehicles.

The message visitors should leave with is:

"If I have a collector car, project vehicle, barn find, or vintage parts collection, this is the person I should call before I sell or throw anything away."

Does not have a logo, prefers a lighter theme but it's up to you, wants to make sure there's the IG account above the footer. He said he really liked the Gullwing site. He also liked this page for the cars we buy since it lists out everyone <https://www.gullwingmotorcars.com/sell-american-collector-cars/>

Client has dropbox to upload photos, he had a couple you could probably use. Does not have a physical location*